There are also terms with different meanings, depending on their country of origin. For example, in the UK newspapers are called press media, in the USA the term print media is more usual. In the UK, print usually applies to printed items, such as sales or educational literature. Likewise, there are big differences between European and American broadcasting systems, and sponsored radio or TV can mean different things around the world. Outdoor advertising also has different terminology in different countries, especially in North America and the UK. In many cases, alternative British and American terms are given, while some are either European or American terminology is specific to a certain country. Entries have been collected from all parts of the world, including the oral media or folk media of the Third World. Finally, it has been included because of their increasing importance in advertising and public relations, and the dictionary reflects the increasing relevance of satellites and communication technology.
